

Knowledge for Teams

“If you could get all the people in an organization rowing in the same direction, you could dominate any industry, in any market, against any competition, at any time.”

Excerpt from the national best seller, The Five Dysfunctions of a TEAM.

Measured Dimensions Include:

Communication

Collaboration

Cooperation

Coordination

Change

Coaching

Organizations often form teams and expect their employees to be empowered and take on responsibility without knowing for sure that the employees are prepared and ready for their new roles.

The costs of training all employees in these critical team skills, whether they need it or not, can be prohibitive.

Determining what your employees know (and need to know) about working as a team can help you pinpoint your training resources and make sure that all your employees have the tools and skills necessary to perform well.

Using 89 multiple-choice questions, Knowledge for Teams measures what your participants know about effective team skills and behaviors in 6 dimensions.
